The aim is to analyze contributing factors, evaluate current interventions, and identify gaps that may be allowing behavioral problems to persist. This review provides a foundation for preparing practical and sustainable solutions.

Literature review

Moral collapse refers to the gradual decline in ethical values, discipline and respect for conduct among learners. It often manifests through behaviors as bullying, disrespect towards teachers, fighting and disregard for school rules. Research shows that moral collapse develops due to a combination of social, cultural, family and institutional influences.

3

Policy gaps in schools

Although schools establish rules and disciplinary measures problems may arise when rules are not clearly communicated and when enforcement is inconsistent.

Role of moral education

They are designed to instill values honesty, accountability, empathy and respect. When schools integrate value based education into everyday learning, behavioral problems are reduced

Gender specific behavioral patterns

Boys are more likely to engage in visible and physical forms of misconduct such as fighting, bullying and aggressive behavior, which are linked to societal expectations that associate masculinity with toughness and dominance

Impact of socio-cultural influences

Society shapes young peoples morals, social cultural factors contributing to exposure to violence and lack of positive role models.

Key definitions

Moral collapse

- The breakdown of ethical standards and respectful conduct, resulting in behaviours that harm individuals or disrupt the school environment.

Moral education

These are structured learning initiatives aimed at teaching values such as empathy, accountability, discipline and respect.

Current systems in Place at Cherutombo High School

The Disciplinary Committee

- The school operates a disciplinary committee composed of teachers and administration staff. The committee assesses reported cases of misconduct and recommends appropriate actions.

Guidance and counselling services

- Guidance counselling services are available to provide emotional and psychological support to students experiencing challenges.

Peer mediation programs

- The school has introduced peer mediation initiatives where trained students assist in resolving minor conflicts.

Parental Engagement

- Parents are invited to meetings to discuss their children's academic and behavioural progress. This creates collaboration between the school and families.

Behavioral policies and school rules

- Cherutombo High school has established rules and regulations intended to guide student conduct.

However evidence suggest that the policies may not clearly define acceptable behavior in practical terms

Effectiveness of existing systems

Strengths

or behavioral framework

disciplinary policies is that they provide a structured framework that outlines acceptable and acceptable conduct

stitutional Authority through the disciplinary committee

- That presence of a disciplinary committee strengthens the school's authority and ensures that serious cases are handled tional support through guidance and counselling.

- It shows that the school recognizes that behavioural problems may stem from emotional, social or physiological challenges

ent participation through peer mediation

- Peer mediation empowers students to take part in conflict resolution, this fosters leadership responsibility and communication skills

aboration between school and parents

- Parental engagement strengthens the leadership between home and school monitoring becomes more effective when communication exists between teachers and parents.

Limitations

active rather than preventive approach

- the disciplinary committee and punishment measures mainly respond to incidents instead of preventing them.

eremphasis on punishment

- excessive focus on punishment may create fear instead of genuine moral understanding.

imited student engagement in moral reform

- While peer mediation exist, students may not be fully involved in shaping behavioural policies.

igma around counselling services

- some boys may avoid seeking help due to societal expectation
- Inconsistent Parental Involvement not all parents participate in school meetings

Areas of improvement

shift from reactive to preventive strategies

- there is a need to strengthen preventive measures that address behavioral problems before they escalate.

Strengthening moral Education programs

- moral education should be integrated into everyday learning rather than treated as an occasional activity.

Introducing structured mentorship programs

- The school could establish mentorship initiatives involving responsible male teachers.

Enhancing counselling accessibility.

- To improve the impact of guidance and counselling services, the school can work on reducing stigma

Conclusion

The study established that Cherutombo High School has structured systems such as disciplinary policies, a disciplinary committee, guidance and counselling services, peer mediation and parental involvement mechanisms. The analysis further highlighted key areas of improvement including the need for preventive moral education, positive male mentorship, enhanced counselling accessibility, increased student involvement and stronger school-community partnership.

Stage 3

Generation of Ideas

Methodology

- To effectively develop solutions for moral collapse at cherutombo High School, it is important to collect reliable and relevant data through the following methods:

Questionnaires

- Structured questionnaires can be given to students, teachers, and even parents to gather information about behavior patterns.

Interviews

- Face-to-face or virtual interviews with teachers, counselors, and a small sample of students to provide in-depth insights into behavioral challenges.

Observation

- Direct observation involves watching students during classes, break times, or extracurricular activities.

Focus Group Discussions

- Small group discussions with students, teachers, and parents allow participants to share experiences and ideas collectively.

Findings

Introducing structured mentorship programs

- Implementing mentorship initiatives that pair students with positive male role models, such as teachers or community leaders, can be beneficial. These programs aim to demonstrate constructive behavior and provide students with guidance for personal development.

Enhancing counseling and emotional support services

- Make guidance and counseling more accessible and approachable. This could include group sessions, awareness campaigns, and regular check-ins with at-risk students.

Implementing peer mediation and leadership programs

- Train selected students as peer mediators to help resolve minor disputes and promote a culture of responsibility. Leadership programmes can also develop decision-making skills.

Increasing parental and community engagement

- Strengthen collaboration between the school, parents, and community organizations through regular meetings, workshops, and joint initiatives.

Strengthening Moral and value-Based education

- Integrate continuous moral education into the school curriculum through workshops, assemblies, and classroom discussions. Topics should include respect, responsibility, honesty, empathy, and positive masculinity.

Stage 6

Introduction

The final stage of the project focuses on evaluating the effectiveness of the proposed solutions to the problem of moral collapse among boys Cherutombo High School. Based on this evaluation, practical recommendations are made to the school, parents, and the Marondera community to help reduce moral decline among boys and promote positive character development.

Evaluation

- Clear Policies and Procedures

57

Effectiveness

- They promote discipline and order; students know the safety responses and consequences of breaking rules, which discourages misconduct such as bullying.
- Clear procedures also improve safety and security at school.
- Policies about attendance, emergencies and student conduct help protect students and staff
- They help maintain academic focus and productivity

Challenges

- Students should be informed properly for example at orientations, not hosting these gatherings lead to breaking of these policies

Recommendations

- Implementing peer mediation and leadership programs
- They provide proper training for student mediators.
- Select responsible and respectful students.
- Ensure teacher and or counselor supervision.
- Create awareness among students.
- Provide a safe and private space for mediation.
- Monitor and evaluate the program.
- Encourage respect and positive communication

Conclusion

- Implementing well-organized peer mediation programs can help schools reduce conflicts, promote peaceful problem solving, and improve relationships among students, which can also help address moral challenges among boys at Cherutombo High School.
